Tobey, a member of the firm’s Municipal Infrastructure Team, has been appointed Co-Principal Investigator for a Water Research Foundation (WRF) Project that will examine legal issues and challenges faced by utilities should an infrastructure failure occur, and produce a best practices guide for U.S. water utility companies to help them protect against, prevent and reduce claims. The Project was commissioned by the WRF, a global research organization dedicated to advancing the science of water, and awarded to The Cadmus Group, Inc. of Massachusetts. Attorney Tobey will work with Cadmus’ Senior Associate and Project Principal Investigator Katherine Martel, P.E. The collaborative nature of this Project will help water utilities improve their programs and practices to minimize risk.
